

Names from 15th and 16th Century Pisa

The department of history at the University of Pisa has been involved in a study of baptisms in Pisa between 1457 and 1557. That study lists information from the baptismal records of 43,537 people baptized in the town of Pisa between 1457 and 1557 (and can be found at <http://battesimi.sns.it/index.html>). Pisa's population in 1427 was 7333 (according to Christiane Klapisch-Zuber, Una carta del popolamento Toscano negli anni 1427-1430, Milano: Franco Angeli Editore, 1983, as cited in Anthony Molho, Marriage alliance in late medieval Florence, Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press 1994).

In this article, I've analyzed the distribution of given names of the baptized children, as well as the family names, and the occupations of parents; a later version of this article will include the elements in literal patronymic (and matronymic) bynames. The typical structure of a name created from these elements looks something like Raffaello di Miliano di Giovanni da Vecchiano or Caterina di Antonio Agostini. Names may appear without a family name as well, as in Francesco di Piero.

Given Names

There were 22863 boys in this dataset. Of those boys, just over 92% have a single given name. Over 4.6%, 1058 men, have two given names. Another 697 boys (3.0%) have a compound given name, like Giovanni Battista or Michelangelo. Two have an additional name added to a compound given name, while six have three unrelated given names.

There were 20895 girls in this dataset. They have much simpler names; only 98 (well under 0.1%) had a second given name; of those the only case of a possible compound name is Maria Maddelena, a name two of those women had. There are no examples of girls with three given names.

The names themselves are listed after this text.

Bynames

The structure of bynames in this data is a little complicated, as these are baptismal records. However, the most common pattern seems to be to identify the child as his/her father's child, using di X (where X is the father's given name followed by some combination of a grandfather's name and a family name). Occasionally a child is identified as his/her mother's child. It seems likely that this is in cases where the child is not acknowledged by his father.

In many (but not all) cases, the grandfather of the child is identified as well, again using di X after the father's name. Again, in many (but not all) cases, a family name is identified. Family names are far more common in this data than they are in the 1427 Catasto, when only about 10% of household heads give a family name.

I did not collect frequency or dating data about these other name elements.

Additionally, the occupations of the fathers were recorded. They are listed (with translations, where available) below.

Masculine Given Names by Frequency

This table includes all the names of baptized boys. The header for each name is the standard or most typical form. If it is in brackets, the name is not found here in that form. For each variant the earliest and latest date in the data is given (where the range is 1457-1557).
